Re: Dog Leggs

Dear Dr. Peter Weinstein,

I am writing to let you know how I use Dog Leggs in my practice. I am a small animal practitioner with an interest in musculoskeletal and neurologic disease. Often I see patients with a compromised ability to move and so they are lying down for long periods of time, putting more pressure on their elbows. I use Dog Leggs to treat elbow and forelimb diseases such as decubital ulcers, hygromas and lick granulomas. I also use Dog Leggs as treatment to prevent elbow trauma especially in large breed patients with degenerative myelopathy, intervertebral disk disease (with subsequent paresis or paralysis) and elbow dysplasia or any process that has resulted in arthritic remodeling of the elbow. I have even recommended Dog Leggs for a patient that developed decubital ulcers on the elbows after having been shaved completely for the summer.

Dog Leggs are a great, comfortable (and washable) solution. They allow freedom of movement and protect the thin skin over the elbow. Dog Leggs are custom made for each patient insuring a correct and comfortable fit. Dogs tolerate them well and are able to move freely while wearing them.

I have been very happy with Dog Leggs and do not hesitate to recommend them for my patients. I believe that Dog Leggs would be an excellent benefit of Veterinary Pet Insurance. Dog Leggs are a detail that tells the client you are willing to go the extra mile. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Julie A. Roos DVM
